ON DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

The Board of Domestic Missions, South Georgia Conference, present the following synopsis of their transactions for the past year :

Savannah City Mission was served by Rev. A. M. Wynn, in connection with Wesley Monumental Church. This Church itself is a monument of the wisdom of expending missionary money in large cities, as it has been raised in a few years by this means from the proportions of a tabernacle to a temple. In the meantime it has, by an unparalleled liberality, returned as much money nearly as it has received ; doing this chiefly through its large and flourishing Sunday-school. Few and feeble in numbers, and poor in resources, it has paid more missionary money into the treasury than any Church in our Conference, excepting only that model mother Church, Trinity, Savannah. The pastor has given no written report of his operations in the mission field proper, but it is well known that he has given faithful attention to his work, and during the fearful epidemic of yellow fever, his pastoral services were greatly increased by the heavy demand for visiting the poor of his large parish and the city generally. The Board and the Bishop are so well satisfied of the necessity and expediency of aiding in the effort to extend Methodism in Savannah, that the same appropriation has been made for another year, and an additional minister sent to enlarge operations.

Macon City Mission, (Jones' Chapel), was served by Rev. W. M. D. Bond, very energetically, and with a fair measure of success. He reports a Church valued at $1,500 00; members, two hundred and four; baptized during the year, twelve; paid pastor, $72 45, besides boarding him; raised for repairs and incidental expenses, $38 80. Class-meetings are regularly held, and love-feasts. There is a good Sabbath-school, well attended. This mission is largely sustained by the Mulberry Street Sunday-school, of Macon, this year contributing upwards of $200 00, about half what it gave the year previous. The mission is continued without appropriations, except to allow Mulberry to give its special attention to that work as heretofore.

Broad Street, (Columbus City Mission,) was served by brother J. V. M. Morris, assisted by brother W. H. Johnson. As there is no work outside of the Church and the Church is fully able to pay a single man, by advice and agreement, it is no longer to be classed as a mission. It has one hundred and eighty-nine members; added by baptism and profession, thirty-six; two infants baptized; one Sunday-school; twelve officers and teachers; eighty-one scholars; paid pastor, $275 00; Presiding Elder, $55 00; Bishops, $5 00; Conference collection, $4 50; Domestic Missions, $8 70; Foreign Missions, $7 00; Educational, $5 20; for Sunday-school, $29 90; Poor of the Church, $15 61. There is a debt of $1,500 00 against the Church building, and we have, in consequence, no title to the property.

Albany Mission was served by Rev. R. L. Honiker, who gives us no figures, but the Board advise the continuance of aid to our feeble Church in that city, and the Bishop approves.

Lowndes and Echols Mission was served by Rev. N. B. Ousley. He reports two hundred and thirty-six members; thirty-eight added during the year, by profession, eight by certificate. The charge paid pastor, $492 00; Presiding Elder, $97 60. The field is a good one, yielding good results, but it still needs help, unless it could be served by a single man. It is continued.

Jesup Mission, served by A. Clark, local preacher. He makes a favorable report. The membership is ninety-seven, of which forty-two were received the present year. Important church buildings are on hand, and they are greatly needed. There are four Sunday-schools, sixteen officers and teachers, and sixty-five pupils.

Girard and Trinity Mission, near Columbus, Rev. J. P. Wardlaw, pastor in charge. It is chiefly composed of factory operatives. Has four churches, four hundred and fifty-four members, three Sunday-schools, thirty-three officers and teachers, two hundred and sixty pupils, and has a good library. One hundred and thirty-three Church periodicals are taken, including twenty-five copies of the Southern Christian Advocate, a notable feature, truly, in this report, reflecting the highest credit on the pastor. Paid pastor, $462 75; Presiding Elder, $98 12; Bishops, $2 55; Domestic Missions, $18 00; for superannuates, $15 45; for Sunday-school purposes, $192 05. It should, in the face of these highly encouraging figures, be dismissed from the list of missions, and so it has been by Bishop and Board.

Bryan Mission is reported by Rev. W. J. Jordan, a local preacher. There are four organized Churches, with a membership of one hundred and six. There is one Sunday-school, three officers, twenty pupils, and a small library. Has paid to preacher and Presiding Elder $91 53, built a good country church, added forty-nine by profession and baptized four infants. It is not a very fruitful field, but this is the best report for the last fifty years, and it is continued.

Branchville Mission, reported by Rev. S. W. Stubbs. It has four appointments and one hundred and twenty-five members; received by profession during the year, fifty-two; infants baptized, two. It has two Sunday-schools, fourteen officers and teachers and eighty-six pupils. Paid pastor $98 00, besides board; Presiding Elder, $16 25; Home Missions, $6 00; Foreign Missions, $7 00; Conference collections, $2 00; Bishops, $1 25. It is said to be prosperous.

Mount Vernon Mission, Rev. C. C. Hines, reports ninety new members by profession and twenty-six infants baptized. There are five Sunday-schools, fifteen teachers, one hundred scholars, and about fifty periodicals taken. Paid pastor, $277 30; Presiding Elder, $25 00; Domestic Missions, $31 90; Foreign Missions, $15 00; Bishops, $3 00; Conference collections, $15 00. The pastor reports an encouraging prospect.

Cedar Springs Mission, in Early county, has four appointments and ninety-three members; Sunday-schools feeble, and the spiritual condition of the work not very encouraging, but it is a field that needs cultivation and help from the Board. Served by Rev. S. R. Weaver.

Moultrie Mission has ten appointments and eight Churches. These buildings are very poor; one put up during the year worth $200 00. There is a young mens' prayer meeting doing good and working well. The Sunday-schools are not well supplied with facilities. There have been revivals. The spiritual condition has been greatly improved, for it was at the beginning very low; now three-fourths of the male members are praying people. It has been served by Rev. C. D. Adams.

Spring Hill Mission, by Rev. W. F. Roberts, has nine appointments; a membership of three hundred and forty; fourteen added during the year; baptized twenty-seven children. There are four Sunday-schools; about eighty pupils; twelve of our Church periodicals are taken; paid pastor $185 40; Presiding Elder $20 60; Domestic Missions $17 00; Foreign Missions $4 85; Conference collection $2 35; Orphan's Home $41 00; Bishop $2 00; for Sunday-schools $6 00. The work is advancing spiritually and may become self-sustaining in a few years.

Eastman Mission, by Rev. J. E. Rorie, lies mainly in Dodge county. Some of the Churches are unpromising, others present a hopeful prospect, especially "Eastman," a growing town, which in time, (if it continues to grow,) will become a station. It has one hundred and eighteen members; two Sunday-schools; about forty pupils. There have been fifteen accessions to the Church; infants baptized, seven; paid pastor $150 00; Presiding Elder $30; the entire assessments ordered were paid in full, viz: Conference collection $15 00; Bishop's fund $3; Domestic Mission $20 00; Foreign Mission $10 00; Orphans' Home $49 00. A good report, truly, reflecting credit on preacher and people.

Camden Mission, on the coast, Rev. T. S. Armistead. There are four Churches worth $600 00; a parsonage with fifty acres of land attached, worth $200 00; infants baptized twelve, adults two; paid preacher in charge $120 25; Presiding Elder $26 60; Bishop fund $6 25; for superannuates $10 50; Foreign Missions $8 50, and $8 50 for Domestic Missions. The work is not in a very good condition, but it needs fostering care and should have it.

Wilcox Mission, in Wilcox county, served by Rev. M. H. Gallaway, has six appointments; fifty-six members; fifteen added. The field is large and greatly needs attention, as Calvinism abounds and makes much opposition to Methodism. Paid pastor $88 94; no other collections made. The Missionary says: "I have walked one thousand nine hundred miles to fill the appointments." Who can make such a showing as that?

Ocapilco Mission, Rev. J. H. D. McRae, has five appointments, three of these built within the past two years. There are sixty-eight accessions reported; Sunday-schools at three places; one hundred and forty scholars enrolled. Paid pastor and assistant $275 00; it has never asked any aid of the Board, and prefers to be called a circuit.

Bulloch Mission, Rev. James R. Ware, reports one hundred nine members; one local preacher; infants baptized two; accessions twenty-five; Sunday-schools five; officers and teachers eight; pupils eighty-eight; periodicals taken six. Paid $115 00 to pastor, besides boarded himself and wife and horse. Paid for Sunday-schools $6 00; Orphans' Home $11 00; for Domestic Mission $6 25; Presiding Elder $10 00. The work is doing well spiritually.

Laurens Mission, by Rev. W. Fisk Bearden. Has four church organizations; value of Church property $750 00; paid pastor $72 20; Presiding Elder $8 00; Domestic Missions $3 50; Foreign Missions $1 90; superannuates $9 15; Bishop's fund $2 00; Orphans' Home $5 50; members two hundred and four; accessions twenty; Sunday-schools two; scholars fifty; officers and teachers seven; pastor reports revivals in some places; he does not give a very flattering report, but advises a continuance of the mission.

Ochlocknee Mission, by Rev. J. W. Jackson, local preacher. He says there are five organized Churches with about ninety members in all; two Sunday-schools; additions this year fifty. This field is truly missionary ground.

Is not this exhibit large and minute enough to meet the requirements of the Secretary's Annual Report? If carefully read, the answer would be affirmative, for the facts and figures furnish instruction and argument in favor of Missionary operations. The Secretary, impressed with the indifference towards this rather unattractive literature of the Church, respectfully offers some additional reflections and observations designed to awaken deeper feeling on this momentous subject.

Our treasurer shows that less than $4,000 00 have been given to the cause of Domestic Missions in the South Georgia Conference, and about half so much to the cause of Foreign Missions. This is less than twenty cents per member of our entire membership—a lamentable, shameful showing, which almost necessitates a belief that our people are themselves but half converted. For what is that religion worth which begins and ends in mere opinion and emotion, and is not characterized by a manifest zeal for the salvation of others, even of all the world. We may well doubt whether that man will go to heaven at all who is content to go there alone. "God will have mercy and not sacrifice:" and if an ignorant and depraved population do not call for compassion and Christian effort, where can subjects be found for the exercise of this Christlike virtue? Let us grant, as we frankly do, that there is no part of our State so poor as to be unable to maintain the Gospel on an economical basis; and further, there is no section so benighted as not to know something of Christian institutions, yet it is evident that there are many parts of the Conference where there is neither sufficient appreciation nor liberality to sustain the Gospel. It may seem admissible to let such people alone in their sinful content to live and die as they please. This is not the theory nor spirit of Christianity; it differs to the last degree from the conduct of Jesus, the Saviour. Humanity, nay even infidel philosophy, dictates a community of interest in the ranks of Adam's race, leading to a diffusion of everything tending to its elevation and enrichment. The benevolent affections cannot be cultivated to any liberal degree without the efforts of the intelligent and rich to ameliorate the condition of the poor and ignorant. A religion that does not seek expansion will witness contraction, and finally extinction. The bane of the world is selfishness; the last demon to be exorcised from the human breast. Christianity must not be propagated from selfish motives, or an argument would be urged in favor of Christian missions on grounds of political economy, showing that the most rapid augmentation of wealth would accrue from a rapid extension of Christianity in the world. If the whole globe was Christianized, the wealth now paraded in statistical tables would appear as a rill to a river, as moonbeams to sunshine. Barbarians and half civilized and ignorant people have few wants, have little enterprise, and contribute but little to the general wealth of the world. We desist from this argument as a mere suggestion is sufficient for the wise, and the ignorant cannot be made to comprehend such an argument at all. That there is a feeble sentiment among our people on this subject is too evident for dispute. We have served two stations in Georgia, (one in North Georgia, the other in South Georgia Conference,) which once respectively paid more missionary money than the two entire districts pay now, including these cities located in said districts. Admit the poverty resulting from war, bad legislation and cotton growing, no possible vindication can be made for a people numbering five thousand in a single Presiding Elder's district that failed to pay five hundred dollars this year for domestic missions—less than ten cents per member! This state of things is explicable only on the supposition of feeble faith in the cause or in defective plans. We believe the failure is traceable to both these causes. It is doubted whether our preachers are themselves fully alive in the advocacy of the cause, well prepared with information to deal out in burning zeal to the people. They fatally err in postponing their collections to the close of the year. They sometimes violate the law—positive statute—by blending collections which should in all cases be kept separate. The Secretary ventures another explanation of our present lamentable exhibit. He believes the whole assessment system erroneous in conception and pernicious in effect. When we did best as a Conference, (the old Georgia,) assessments were wholly unknown. Per capita and pro rata have done the work; they are the sappers and miners steadily working for a grand explosion. Tell a rich Church $200 00 is the amount it is expected to raise, and brother Croesus, expert in figures, says: "O, very well, my part is about $5 00; here it is, take it." And everybody does the same thing, only everybody don't pay. What an absurdity to go before a congregation to make a flaming speech, and then to limit its effect by setting every one to a petty calculation not to see how much, but how little, he can give. Money in large sums can only be had from those who have it, and the Church should look to the utilizing the idle and abundant means of those able to pay. One thing the Board has done, it has reduced the appropriations very much—(not that they were too large, for they were really meagre)—to avoid the disgrace of a yearly failure. From necessity, the South Georgia Conference will long have missionary fields in her territory; these may not always be wisely located, but the past shows, amid many failures, abundant success. Our last year's results are creditable and encouraging in everything except the collections, and let us hope that new zeal will be inspired, better plans devised, and a more favorable condition of the country favor our operations. Let us begin early and work late, seeking to advance the cause in public estimation, and to do something worthy of our Conference not only at home, but for the Pagan world and the benighted people under the sway of deadly heresies and superstitions.

J. W. HINTON, Secretary.

ON EDUCATION.

Your committee have carefully analyzed the reports referred to our consideration. The report from Emory College is able, complete and gratifying. There has been a considerable increase of patronage. The corps of instruction has been strengthened, and the course of study enlarged and improved. The faculty and students have been blessed with health and harmony. The young men of the College have been characterized by studiousness, propriety and good morals, and better than all, the institution has enjoyed the gracious visitations of the Holy Spirit. We are gratified to learn that Mr. H. A. Scomp, elected to the chair vacated by Mr. John M. Doggett, for some years the accomplished Professor of Greek, has shown himself to be a thorough and successful instructor in the Greek and Hebrew languages. We heartily indorse the action of the Board of Trustees in creating the chair of Vocal Music, and in the election of Professor McIntosh to fill it. We rejoice in the completion of the College buildings, and in the progress made in the way of apparatus, library and endowment. While we most heartily commend this noble institution of learning to all concerned, especially to Methodists everywhere, as pre-eminently worthy of their patronage and support, we earnestly urge upon the members of this Conference that they cheerfully, actively co-operate with the President and Faculty in all their plans and efforts to develop and enlarge its sphere of usefulness.

The usual report from the Board of Trustees of the Wesleyan Female College has not reached us. We have only the report of the Board of Visitors. The organization of the College is eminently satisfactory; the Faculty ample and competent; the standard of scholarship high; the discipline mild but firm; the methods of instruction wise and thorough.

There has been a slight decrease in patronage—one hundred and sixty-five against one hundred and eighty-five pupils last year—occasioned, manifestly, by the stringency of the times and the prevalence of the yellow fever as an epidemic within the bounds of this Conference. The moral and religious tone of the College is gratifying in the highest degree. The young ladies are represented as notably tractable, studious and pious. We could say much for this venerable Mother of Colleges, but we forbear. She speaks for herself. Her glorious record is “known and read of all men.” Her praise is in all the land. Let us rally to her support. Give her our influence. Send her our daughters, and liberally contribute to her of our means until she shall be amply endowed.

The report from Andrew Female College shows the matriculation during the year of seventy-six pupils. Mr. A. H. Flewellen has resigned the Presidency, and Professor Sheats elected to fill the vacancy. To the retiring President we can only express our regret at his loss and our sincere desire for his success in his new field of labor; and to his worthy successor we tender a hearty welcome, and pledge such support as has been heretofore extended to this institution of learning. We commend him and Andrew Female College to the public generally as worthy of their confidence and support.

We are doing something toward the education of young men for the ministry, not as much as we ought to do, but the report of the Treasurer will show a respectable balance of cash on hand. We beg leave to suggest that only such young men be recommended to the Board for assistance as are clearly convinced of their Divine call to the work of the ministry, and to express our thorough conviction that it is best for all parties concerned that every such young man should receive such education as we may be able to give him at Emory College.

In conclusion, we recommend the presiding Bishop to appoint Dr. W. C. Bass, President, and Revs. C. W. Smith and H. W. Key, professors in Wesleyan Female College, and Dr. O. L. Smith, professor in Emory College, and that he appoint visiting committees to Emory, and to Wesleyan and Andrew Female Colleges.

ON SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

Your committee to whom was referred the interests of Sabbath-schools, beg leave to make the following report:

Number of Sunday-schools, 316; Officers, 2,020; Pupils, 12,631; Requisites, 13,316; Volumes in Library, 11,780; Collections from Sunday-schools for Foreign Missions, $353 24; for Domestic Missions, $948 98. Increase in the number of Schools, 6—of officers, 99—and of pupils, 299. Decrease in Sunday-school Requisites, 4,023—and in Volumes in Library, 635.

Surely the magnitude of this enterprise should command the attention of the whole Church, and employ the best talent in its advancement. The age in which we live is emphatically a Sabbath-school age; and direliction in this respect is a calamity to any Church or community.

It is good to have suitable literature, and stress the use of it, but we must do more than hear mere rehearsals—we must labor to impress the spirit of the Gospel upon the young. And we cannot be too careful in the selection of teachers in our schools; for how can a man teach spirituality who has never been born of the Spirit. "The natural man understandeth not the things of the Spirit."

And it would be well for us to devise a variety of plans to renew the interest in our schools, and avoid the monotony of running in old ruts in conducting them, by appointing monthly or quarterly lectures, so as to keep alive the interest, or any other approved method by which this may be done.

It has been suggested that we recommend the election of Sunday-school Superintendents at the Fourth Quarterly Conference. Also, that we urge the patronage of our own Sunday-school literature—the Magazine, Visitor, Little People, and Lesson Papers—and for little children, "Methodist Catechism," etc., by Rev. A. M. Thigpen, of the North Georgia Conference; and we think our young people and parents would all be benefitted by the use of "Our Children," by Dr. A. G. Haygood—and also our Wesleyan Catechism.

We recommend the following resolutions:

Resolved, 1. That we will pledge our continued and renewed interest in the Sabbath-school cause.

2. That we recommend the election of Sabbath-school Superintendents at the Fourth Quarterly Conference.

3. That we have great confidence in our Sunday-school Secretary, Rev. W. E. G. Cunyningham, and that we pledge to him our continued support.

A. J. DEAN, Chairman.

ON BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

The Committee on Books and Periodicals report as follows:

There is no higher duty at present incumbent upon the Church, and no broader field for the development of christian enterprise, than the general dissemination of religious literature among the masses. While this is emphatically an age of advancing civilization, and the public mind, stimulated by the past progress, is thirsting for the unfolding of new truths in the department of popular science and secular literature; while the great problem of giving to the masses such intellectual training as will fit them for the duties and responsibilities of an intelligent citizenship is engaging the minds of statesmen and philanthropists, it is truly painful to reflect that the efforts of the Church at large, in seeking to promote the culture of the heart, are not commensurate with the demands which the new order of things seem to call forth. Knowledge is power—power for the accomplishment of salutary ends only as it is sanctified by the cultivation of the moral sensibilities. An advanced literature may go far to exalt the mind and adorn the social walks of life, yet it is only in the union of intellectual attainments with the culture of the heart that we can expect the fruits of virtue and happiness; and, at this particular juncture in our history, when the champions of infidelity are endeavoring by false deductions of science to prejudice the public mind against the teachings of our holy religion, it becomes us to put forth renewed efforts in the dissemination of religious knowledge. In order to do this, we, as a Church, enjoy every facility. Having a publishing house of our own constantly issuing books adapted to the wants of the age, and representing our own peculiar religious views, we have a prolific source from which to draw all needed supplies. While this is an age in which it can be truly said, "of making many books there is no end," still, we submit that there are no publications more conducive to the ends which we as a great christian community are seeking to accomplish, than those issued from the publishing house at Nashville. We would urge, therefore, upon our preachers and people, the importance of disseminating these our own religious publications, as by so doing we may accomplish the twofold purpose of elevating the moral and religious tone of the people and of aiding our book agent to liquidate a large debt necessarily incurred in the past.

We would make particular mention of the admirably selected libraries for the young on sale by our book agent. Every Sunday-school should be fully supplied with these interesting publications, and all our children should be encouraged to read them.

The book, "Our Children," by Dr. A. G. Haygood, though not issued from our publishing house, well deserves the encomiums bestowed and the flattering success realized in its circulation. No household should be without a copy. Besides these, the circulation of our standard theological works, our Hymn Books, and Book of Discipline, will be found to afford material assistance in our work of evangelization. With reference to our religious periodicals, it is, perhaps, necessary to say but little. It is, doubtless, true that no publication has such claims upon our attention and patronage as The Southern Christian Advocate. Fully alive to all the material interests of the Church, and particularly the organ of the Georgia Conferences, comes to us weekly, freighted with such general reading and religious intelligence as will adapt it to meet all the requirements of a popular religious journal. It is a matter to be profoundly regretted that the circulation of the paper has been materially diminished during the past year. This is, doubtless, attributable mainly to two causes: 1st. The marked stringency of the times, a difficulty to be met only by renewed efforts on the part of the agents; and secondly, a higher subscription price than is asked for many other religious weeklies. Your committee would express the hope that they may find it practicable to reduce the price of the paper to $2 00 at an early day. Our Sunday-school periodicals, the Visitor and Our Little People, are still maintaining their claim upon our increasing patronage. Their introduction into our Sabbath-schools is found to be a marked element of success and progress in the prosecution of this important Church enterprise.

We make favorable mention of the Nashville Christian Advocate, the central organ of the M. E. Church, South, published at Nashville, Dr. Thomas O. Summers, editor. To those who desire to keep informed with reference to the operation of the Church at home and abroad, no medium of communication can supersede the Nashville Advocate.

The Southern Quarterly Review has also claims upon us which we cannot well ignore. Its quarterly visits bring treasures of truth in the development of moral and religious science, which no one seeking a broad religious culture can afford to lose.

We submit the following resolutions:

Resolved, 1. That we pledge a renewal of our co-operation with our Book Agent in his efforts to steer the Publishing House safely through the difficulties which seem to threaten its very existence.

2. That we will put forth additional efforts during the ensuing Conference year to retrieve the fortunes of our own Southern Christian Advocate, and restore it to its former circulation.

GEORGE C. CLARKE, Chairman.

ON ORPHANS' HOME.

The Board of Trustees of the Orphans' Home beg leave most respectfully to submit the following as their report for the past year :

With profoundly grateful hearts, and consciously recognizing the Divine superintendence and goodness, we render sincere thanks to Almighty God for his special blessings upon this great enterprise of the Church since our last Conference. We more than ever believe that God has, and is showing his special favor and approbation toward this noble christian charity. Through all the peculiarly delicate probation, trials and discipline of the past few years, he has safely guided us thus far, and led us into a "large," if not a "wealthy" place. In our report one year ago we said : "Our plans and arrangements for the future are such that we reasonably, and yet confidently hope to relieve ourselves of all liabilities, and also economically sustain the Home for the next year." This hope has not been disappointed, but fully met. Notwithstanding the universal and deep financial pressure upon all our people during the year, our worthy, most efficient, and indefatigable agent, under the divine blessing, aided by the co-operation of a number of our preachers and the christian sympathy and liberality of our people, has been able to raise means sufficient to pay our indebtedness—something over $1,900 00—and pay all the expenses of the Home during the year up to January 1st, 1877, with more than $100 00 to begin the next year.

The agent has raised in cash during the year, $3,700 00; also a considerable amount of supplies, the estimated amount of which, together with donations sent direct to the Home from different friends and Churches, and the amount contributed by the wonderfully successful efforts of the Ladies' Auxiliary Orphans' Home of Macon, amount to an aggregate of about $5,000 00. In addition to this he has obtained subscriptions, which were to have been paid during the year, of about $2,000 00, most of which might have been brought up to Conference with anything like a reasonable effort on the part of pastors where these subscriptions were obtained, and which we think will yet be paid for the most part.

There have been twenty-eight children under the care of the institution during the year; eight of these have been provided with good, religious homes in different families within our bounds. The utmost discretion, carefulness and judgment have been exercised in this part of our delicate work, and we believe the best interests of the children have been served in all these cases. Sixteen now remain in the Home.

The management of the Home under the superintendence of brother J. B. Wardlaw, and his most estimable and efficient wife, has been Christian, refining, elevating, and successful. The happy change in the general conduct, behavior and manners of the children, is most noticeable and worthy of all praise.

We are now where we can, ought, and intend, to enlarge our sphere of operations as to the number of orphans provided for. As early as we can, we expect to fill the institution up to its present capacity, and then, as God may open the way, enlarge our capacity and broadly and firmly establish this Christian home for orphans.

The great interest taken in the Home by some individuals and Churches, and auxiliary societies in our Conference, merit our sincere praise and gratitude. We cannot forbear to mention the noble and unceasing efforts of the ladies of Macon through their auxiliary society. The estimated value of their contributions in money and supplies is $800 00. Then, they have manifested great personal interest in the inmates and management of the institution, deserving commendation.

The imperative necessity for economizing in all our arrangements and plans for the future, demand that we consolidate the agency and superintendency under one management. This will require a partial change in our plan of operations during the next year. But the great saving of means and the labor of one man, dictates and justify the change, and will command approval.

It is impossible to compute the value and benefits growing out of the labors of the officers of this institution during the year, especially those of our worthy agent. Traveling and preaching extensively through the Conference upon the subject of Christian benevolence, he has helped to widen these streams until it is most noticeable that where preachers and people have welcomed and aided him in this special charity, all the other benefactions of the Church have done the best, while the converse of this is equally true. Then, the sympathies and hearts of hundreds have been enlisted in behalf of the orphan, and of the Church seeking to care for the orphan that have never before been stirred, until now scores and scores are seeking the privilege of helping in this good work by furnishing homes for orphans beneath their own roofs, or are contributing most cheerfully to help us do it for them.

Again we say, and with special emphasis, that if all our brethren of the Conference and Church could but find it in their hearts to give us their cheerful, hearty and earnest support, confidence and help, for a year or two more, with heaven's blessing we shall be able to make this Home an honor to our Conference and Church, and a benefaction to hundreds of helpless, homeless orphans, over this land. Therefore

Resolved, That we do hereby, through the Conference, ask the presiding Bishop to appoint Rev. L. B. Payne as our agent and superintendent for the Orphans' Home for next year.

ON BIBLE CAUSE.

The Bible needs no defense at our hands. 'Tis God's revealed will to man. The world is blessed or cursed as it accepts or rejects its Divine teachings. The history of the past, the admonitions of the present, profoundly impress us with this truth. The world is its parish, and every fallen son of the Adamic race its subject. The Church is specially commissioned to send this Holy word to the ends of the earth. Those who have been partakers of its blessings, and are walking under the light of its benign influence, should assuredly contribute to its distribution. Probably no one organization is doing more than the American Bible Society in the great work of Christianizing the nations. All Evangelical Christians should unite their efforts with her, that the world may be brought to the knowledge of God's word. Over thirty-three million copies of the Bible have been issued by this Society in the past sixty years. Her donations the past year amount to $260,168 72. Her colporteurs have visited five million five hundred thousand families in the last ten years. Nearly one-tenth of these she has gratuitously supplied with the Bible. Year by year should Christians renew their energy and double their zeal for the promotion of this glorious work.

The Society has enlarged the districts and reduced the number of her superintendents. We have only one now for Georgia and Florida; heretofore we had two. They lessen the expense in this direction that they may more effectually supply the destitute fields. The old auxiliary societies will be expected to perpetuate their existence and push forward their work without the immediate supervision of the superintendent. All Evangelical ministers should co-operate with this economical and benevolent movement by holding regularly the anniversary meetings of the auxiliary societies and enlarging their work without the aid of the superintendent, knowing that thereby they are helping the missionary fields.

Resolved, 1. That as we have heard of the resignation of Rev. W. A. Parks, as Agent of the American Bible Society, we hereby express our high appreciation of his laborious and efficient efforts in that important field of Christian work, and pray that the blessings of a kind Providence may attend him in his new field of labor.

2. That we commend Rev. Mr. Lyon, Agent of the American Bible Society, to the people of this Conference, and hereby pledge ourselves to aid him to the extent of our ability in the noble and glorious work to which he is called.

JOINT BOARD OF FINANCE.

Attention is called to the sixteenth answer of the question : "What are the duties of a preacher who has charge of a Circuit, Station, or Mission ?"

"To make a written report of the condition of all the claimants on the Conference collection within his pastoral charge, at each Annual Conference, to be submitted to the Joint Board of Finance."

By the decision of the Bishop no one has authority to pay over to any claimant any moneys collected for this purpose; it must, in all cases, go to the Joint Board of Finance.

To meet the claims upon the Board for the ensuing year it will require $6,000 00 for claimants, and $1,200 00 for support of Bishops.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

---

The District Conference shall be composed of all the preachers in the District, traveling and local, including superannuated preachers, (whether residents without or within the limits of the Annual Conferences to which they belong,) and two delegates from each Quarterly Conference, and one from each Society or Church within the bounds of the District.

With sad hearts we meet to-day. Death has struck down by our sides one of the most honored and gifted of our number. Our beloved brother, EDWARD HOWELL MYERS, is no more among the living.

He who for thirty-five years answered to the annual roll call of the Conference, will meet with us no more. It is fitting that we pause at his grave and draw lessons of wisdom from his life.

Dr. Myers was born in Orange county, New York, on the 9th of January, 1816, and had just completed his sixtieth year. His father emigrated to Florida during his childhood, and he was reared to manhood in that State.

He received thorough academic training, and graduated with distinction at Randolph-Macon College, Virginia, in the year 1838. It was during his College life that he recognized God's claims to his service in the work of the ministry. In a letter from Randolph-Macon, in July, 1837, there occurs this language: "In order to discharge my duty more faithfully to my God and to my fellow-creatures, I have taken license to preach."

Upon leaving College, he was employed first in the Manual Labor School at Covington, and afterwards as tutor in Emory College, at Oxford, Georgia. In January, 1841, he was admitted on trial into the Georgia Conference, and was regularly engaged in the work of the pastorate until 1845, when he was called to the Professorship of Natural Science in Wesleyan Female College, at Macon, Georgia. In July, 1851, he succeeded Dr. William H. Ellison to the presidency of the College, which position he filled with great distinction to himself and advantage to the College, till he was called to the Editorial Chair of the Southern Christian Advocate, by the General Conference of 1854.

For seventeen years he occupied this responsible position, and was an active agent in moulding opinion on all the great questions of Church polity.

In the winter of 1871, he resigned this important trust to meet the wants of the Church a second time as President of Wesleyan Female College—a post made vacant by the death of the lamented Dr. Bonnell.

After three years of service in the College, he returned to the regular pastorate, and at the Conference held in Savannah in December, 1874, he was appointed to Trinity Church of that city, and at the ensuing session he was reappointed to the same charge, from which he was called to his place in the Church above.

We have merely mentioned the fields of labor in which he toiled. What he accomplished would fill a volume. He was a master-workman in all departments of labor. A thorough scholar himself, the impress of his great mind was seen in the well-stored and polished intellects that enjoyed the benefit of his teaching. Female education in Georgia owes much to him; for no instructor of women had higher regard for their claims, or did more to elevate and improve them. He was a Christian teacher, and sought the religious welfare of his pupils. While polishing their minds he strove also to cultivate their hearts, and he was never satisfied unless he saw the fruit of his labor. His heart was often cheered by assurances of his success. He had many letters, from time to time, from former pupils, saying, in effect: "You, my dear teacher, first brought me to a knowledge of my Saviour." "I owe all my Christian life to your prayers and counsels while in College." Such testimonials from grateful pupils have, since his death, brought comfort to the mourning heart of his bereaved widow, and constitute an enduring monument of his useful life.

Dr. Myers, as a writer and editor, had few equals. Refined and cultivated in taste, he possessed rare qualifications for the important and delicate duties connected with the editorial chair. Original, discriminating, bold, he never hesitated in the expression of his views on all the great questions suitable for discussion in a religious journal. He was judicious and far-seeing. He had an analytical mind. Surface work did not satisfy him. He penetrated subjects and understood them thoroughly. His opinions were not hastily formed, and though quick in his apprehensions of men and things, his judgments were always founded upon reason. He was tenacious of his opinions because he was conscientious. He sought for the truth, and when he obtained what he conceived to be truth, he never relinquished it, unless convinced that his own judgment was mistaken; then he was prompt in his confession of error.

Dr. Myers was a candid man. He never sought the good will of men by flattering them. Motives of policy and self-aggrandizement never controlled his action. "Is it right?" "What is my duty?" were the great questions that regulated his life. Kind-hearted, generous, unsuspecting, he sought to obey the golden rule, and did to others as he would have them do to him. His candor was sometimes misconstrued, but time generally set him right, and those who were wounded by his plain words came to love him as a true friend.

Dr. Myers, as a preacher, possessed rare powers. He loved to preach. It was the work to which he believed God had called him. A serious throat affection made it impossible for him to devote himself exclusively to the ministry. He never allowed an opportunity to preach to pass unimproved. His exegesis of texts was always satisfactory. He thoroughly analyzed his subject, and from the store-house of his varied knowledge, shed light upon the most recondite themes, so that his hearers went away instructed and edified.

There were times when he preached with surpassing power and eloquence. Rising with the grandeur of his theme, he carried his audience with him, and oftentimes, under the spell of his burning words, multitudes have been cut to the heart.

In prayer, like Jacob, he wrestled with God, and as a "prince" he prevailed. Such humble supplication, such earnest entreaty, such tender intercession, such overwhelming appeals to the Divine heart, have seldom been heard from mortal lips. He seemed to take hold of the very horns of the altar, and the answer generally came in copious showers of grace.

His last official work was perhaps his greatest. Entrusted by the chief officers of the church with the delicate matters of fraternity between the Northern and Southern branches of Methodism, he became the great pacificator—so that the Northern Commission unanimously testify of his meek, gentle, peace-loving, Christ-like spirit—and attribute to his presence and influence more than to that of any other member of the Joint Commission, the harmonious and satisfactory settlement of the questions that had disturbed the church for thirty years. His book on the "Two Methodisms" showed his intellectual grasp, illustrated his thorough knowledge of the whole question at issue; his magnanimity and Christ-likeness appear in his willingness to forget his book for the peace of Jerusalem.

Some feared that Dr. Myers would be impracticable, and that the breach would be widened by his presence; but his charity bridged the chasm, his religion cemented the bond of union, and he went to his death with the blessing of the peace-maker resting upon his head.

He was a wise counsellor, and no man in all the church was better calculated to lead the hosts of Israel. In Annual and General Conferences his voice was uttered in wisdom, and much of the improvement in Southern Methodism is largely, if not chiefly, owing to his counsels. He loved the church, the whole church. His heart beat in sympathy with all that concerned its weal.

Broad, catholic, large-hearted, "No pent up Utica confined his views," but in his far-reaching plans, he looked to the general triumph of the gospel, and was ready to sacrifice all that was dear to himself for the advancement of his Master's kingdom. His trust in the providence of God was implicit. He had an unwavering faith, based upon his knowledge of God through Christ. He trusted God as a child trusts his parent—confidingly and lovingly.

It was in this spirit of trust that he hastened to the plague-stricken city of Savannah, upon the first announcement of the presence of yellow fever in that city. Sojourning for several weeks at the North, in the interest of the Church, in full health he had reason to believe that he was going into the very jaws of death. Yet duty called him—his flock was without a shepherd—they needed his presence—and to such a man, the voice of duty was the voice of God. For a month, by day and night, he braved the pestilence, waiting upon the sick and ministering to the dying. His heart was touched by the scenes of woe which he was called upon to witness, and from the last scene of distress, he turned away, saying, "I had rather die myself than witness another such scene."

His work was done. The Master saw that His servant was ready and called him to his reward. The fatal disease seized him on Thursday, and on the following Tuesday, September 26th, at 7 o'clock in the morning, E. H. Myers was dead.

His beloved wife, the day before, conscious of his extreme illness, had questioned him on the subject of his preparation. His reply was, "I am ready—I have been ready for many years." Noble man—sainted martyr—the life of faith which he led, kept him ready for his translation, whether by Elijah's rapturous flight, or the terrible epidemic of yellow fever. As he neared his end, articulation was denied him—and he who had so often thrilled others by the powers of his eloquence, lay helpless and speechless, and all that could be gathered from his almost silent lips were, "wife, children, Church"—the three objects dearest his heart—meaning, doubtless: May the God of the Church I have loved so well, take care of my wife and children—a sacred legacy which the Church will never forget.

Thus died this great and good man, in the rich maturity of his powers, and crowned with the love and confidence of his brethren. We shall miss his familiar face, his genial smile, his wise counsels. Long years will pass before another, his equal, shall take his place. Yet, while we miss him, we rejoice in the grace that redeemed and sanctified him, and made him worthy of a martyr's crown.

May the Great Head of the Church comfort the widow and orphans of our beloved brother—and inspire us with the faith and zeal that made his life noble, and his death glorious.

BY BISHOP GEORGE F. PIERCE.

"For David after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep and was laid unto his fathers." ACTS, 13-36.

I have chosen this passage, not as a text out of which to elaborate a sermon, but because it embodies a thought, the statement of which will constitute an appropriate preface to the life and character of the Rev. EDWARD H. MYERS, of whom the following discourse is an affectionate memorial:

In the long list of Old Testament worthies, the Patriarch David stands conspicuous. Wonderfully endowed by nature, his whole history was eventful and singularly diversified. Born in obscurity—the son of a plain yeoman—living in the little village of Bethlehem, he seemed destined to the humble occupation of a shepherd. The changes which took place in his condition were not in his thought nor wrought out by his design. He was led by a way which he knew not. He was not haughty, nor his eyes lofty, nor did he aspire to things too high for him. Coming suddenly upon the notice of his countrymen, and rising rapidly in their confidence and admiration, when rebuked by the courtiers of Saul as a restless, ambitious youth, intriguing with subtlety and vaulting ambition for place and power, he appealed triumphantly to heaven for the humility of his spirit and the lowliness of his plans. Without ungodly aspirations, or even carnal preferences, he avowed himself as a "weaned child," subdued, submissive, ready to advance or retire as the will of God might be. Well taught in the religion of his forefathers, he recognized the sovereignty and providence of Almighty God—and in trust and hope he bided the future. Nothing happens by chance in human affairs, and while the hand of God is not always visible nor his purpose plain; yet he fixes the bounds of our habitation, determines our station, and appoints our talents and opportunities. This great truth David well understood, often avowed it, and found his consolation and security in the belief of it. By divine direction Samuel anointed him as king while yet Saul lived and reigned. Unaffected by his prospective dignity, he returned to his humble avocation. Presently there was war between the Philistines and the king of Israel. Goliath, the giant, the wonder and terror of his age, defied the army of the living God, challenging them to send forth their champion for single combat with him. Despatched by his father with a message to his brethren who were in the host, David saw the mighty foe and heard his defiant summons to battle. Mortified by the timidity of his countrymen, and zealous of the honor of his God and the God of his nation, he promptly proffered to meet the insulting foe.

"For David after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep and was laid unto his fathers." ACTS, 13-36.

I have chosen this passage, not as a text out of which to elaborate a sermon, but because it embodies a thought, the statement of which will constitute an appropriate preface to the life and character of the Rev. EDWARD H. MYERS, of whom the following discourse is an affectionate memorial :

In the long list of Old Testament worthies, the Patriarch David stands conspicuous. Wonderfully endowed by nature, his whole history was eventful and singularly diversified. Born in obscurity—the son of a plain yeoman—living in the little village of Bethlehem, he seemed destined to the humble occupation of a shepherd. The changes which took place in his condition were not in his thought nor wrought out by his design. He was led by a way which he knew not. He was not haughty, nor his eyes lofty, nor did he aspire to things too high for him. Coming suddenly upon the notice of his countrymen, and rising rapidly in their confidence and admiration, when rebuked by the courtiers of Saul as a restless, ambitious youth, intriguing with subtlety and vaulting ambition for place and power, he appealed triumphantly to heaven for the humility of his spirit and the lowliness of his plans. Without ungodly aspirations, or even carnal preferences, he avowed himself as a "weaned child," subdued, submissive, ready to advance or retire as the will of God might be. Well taught in the religion of his forefathers, he recognized the sovereignty and providence of Almighty God—and in trust and hope he bided the future. Nothing happens by chance in human affairs, and while the hand of God is not always visible nor his purpose plain; yet he fixes the bounds of our habitation, determines our station, and appoints our talents and opportunities. This great truth David well understood, often avowed it, and found his consolation and security in the belief of it. By divine direction Samuel anointed him as king while yet Saul lived and reigned. Unaffected by his prospective dignity, he returned to his humble avocation. Presently there was war between the Philistines and the king of Israel. Goliath, the giant, the wonder and terror of his age, defied the army of the living God, challenging them to send forth their champion for single combat with him. Despatched by his father with a message to his brethren who were in the host, David saw the mighty foe and heard his defiant summons to battle. Mortified by the timidity of his countrymen, and zealous of the honor of his God and the God of his nation, he promptly proffered to meet the insulting foe.

With distrust and apprehension Saul consented to accept the youthful combatant, and to stake the fate of Israel upon his prowess. Confiding in his cause and the protection of heaven, David advanced with his sling and the stones from the brook to the seemingly uneven conflict. God honored his faith, and gave him a complete and speedy victory. Greeted by the plaudits of the army he had delivered, the gratitude of the king, the triumphal song of the women, he did not lose his equilibrium, but "behaved wisely, and was accepted in the sight of all the people." But the characteristics which kindled the admiration of the army and the citizens roused the envy and jealousy of the king. The idol of the people became the victim of royal persecution. Expelled from the court by the fear of assassination, he was driven from the haunts of men, wandered in the mountains and dwelt in dens and caves of the earth. With the promise of the kingdom, attested and sealed by the oil of the prophet, he patiently waited his providential time. He formed no conspiracy to oust the apostate Saul, resorted to no unlawful means to hasten his inheritance of the throne. Again and again when the life of his enemy, the king, was in his power, he conscientiously withheld his hand and sought to make his forbearance the ground of reconciliation. When his malignant, unreasonable, implacable foe resisted all overtures for peace, and falsified every covenant into which his fickle temper allowed him to enter, he endured, "suffering wrongfully," quietly waiting the time and the order of God. David's confiding trust in the promise of God, thus delayed, interfered with and threatened, is an illustrious example for those who walk in the darkness of trial and affliction, and cannot forecast the issues of their condition. Doubtless these extraordinary trials were a test of character and a disciplinary preparation for the responsibilities of government. In due season, God being judge, he was crowned king of Judah and afterwards king of Israel, thus realizing in full measure and in propitious conjunction of events all that he had been authorized to expect. His reign was long and eventful. Wars, domestic troubles, rebellion, revolution, succeeded each other. The crown was an honor but a burden as well. The palace was haunted by the ghosts of care and crime and grief. The infidelity of servants, the treason of officers, the death of children—and, worse than death, their guilty plots, intrigues and untimely ends—no wonder he longed for the wings of a dove that he might fly away and be at rest.

The life of this extraordinary man, taken altogether, is one of the most wonderful revolutions recorded in history. At first, a shepherd boy in Bethlehem, he comes to the front a victor in an unequal and famous contest, then a renowned warrior, and at last a powerful monarch. But all along, his path was checkered; sorrows compassed him about, dark clouds flecked his sky and cast their shadows upon his heart, his home, and his throne. But he was a chosen instrument, and fulfilled his destiny, standing in his lot to the end of his days. Concerning him, the Apostle Paul, in his address to the Jews in the synagogue at Antioch, pronounced this high commendation: that David having served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep and was gathered to his fathers. A serene and happy death, the noble end of an honorable, useful life.

Before I proceed regularly with what I propose to say, it may be well to interject a remark concerning a passage in the scripture account of David, often quoted and greatly misapplied. It is said of him by the Almighty: "I have found David, the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfill all my will." This declaration, taken in connection with the acknowledged sins of David's life, has perplexed the pious and been the occasion of ridicule, witticism and sneer on the part of the unbelieving. Interpreted and understood according to its obvious relations and design, its incongruity with recorded facts, vanishes. The expression refers not to his private but his public character; not to his personal conduct, but his official administration. Saul did not rule according to the will of God; he leaned to idolatry; did not obey the divine oracle; sought to be absolute in authority, and subverted the constitution of Israel. David maintained the laws and the worship of God, recognized God as the king, and himself merely as a vicegerent; did not grasp power or pervert the constitution of the kingdom, governed according to the laws and statutes of Moses, conformed to the national religion, and, in his administration, acted according to the divine mind and fulfilled the will of his Maker. Whatever his errors, these have no countenance or indorsement in scripture; but in his official conduct he did obey and execute the laws and reigned in harmony with the will of God.

So much by way of explaining a passage which has troubled many. Our design, however, is with the text, in view of the statement that David served his own generation by the will of God. With this, by suggestion rather than by enlargement.

Every man has his place in the world. Some for the higher spheres of human action, some for the lower. Nor are the intermediate grades left vacant. There are various distinctions in life, and the scripture does not discountenance them. They are not, as some imagine, altogether conventional, selfish, and terminating in the advantage of the higher orders. Both in the world and the church there is a difference of rank of office and of talents, but there is a connection between them and a dependence arising from it. In the ethics of Christianity, each and all are bound by the common law of mutual love and mutual service. Every man, however lowly his condition, is of some importance in society. Great talents are not necessary, to embrace and improve the means and opportunities which heaven provides, else they would be more frequently bestowed. Those occasions which demand five talents are comparatively rare, while those which require two are more common, but those demanding only one are to be found everywhere and every day. This natural and necessary order of things is wisely accommodated to the recognized inequalities of human endowment, and was doubtless intended to forestall the hasty conclusions to which we are prone to come. The responsibility which attaches to intellect, education, position, influence, is readily seen, universally acknowledged; and delinquency, perversion, abuse, is felt to be a crime against God and man. Yet, we who are not so richly endowed, nor so advantageously related, while we sit in judgment upon the culprit and render against him a righteous verdict, forget that we are responsible in our measure, and failure to do what we can, brings us into the same condemnation. Usefulness, considered simply as a fact, whatever may be true as to the degree of it, does not depend upon abilities and station. He who is not doing what he can in his present circumstances, would not do what he imagines if his condition were altered. He that is not faithful in "little," has no reason to believe he would be faithful in "much." But the contrary. The difficulty in all such cases is not a lack of natural ability, but a defect in moral principle. Not the want of means, but a want of character, of conscience, of will-power. Intention, earnestness, consecration, these substitute money gifts, reputation, and they are within reach of all. The reasonings by which we deceive ourselves are not only fallacious when considered abstractly, but they belie our observations and the facts of human experience. The most gifted are not always the most useful. Indeed, very rarely so. The rule of proportion does not work out anticipated results. Might and power are often circumvented, defeated. God will not give his glory to another. He means "to hide pride from man," to check the conceit of intellect, to abash the philosophy of men, and "shut up" the world to faith and dependence. In this respect the providence and grace of God so preside and overrule as to justify effort, encourage exertion. The great lesson taught is, try—do your best. Never mind the arithmetic of numbers, the philosophy of forces, of means and ends, the magnitude of the obstructions, the array of opposition—go forward. It is an easy thing with God "to save by many or few." When Saul and his army were demoralized by terror, afraid to advance, ready to flee, Jonathan and his armor-bearer routed the Philistian host. I have often seen simple-hearted, earnest men, who, through infirmity of the reasoning faculty, were able to hope when wiser men would have despaired, project plans and achieve wonders. "In the morning sow thy seed, in the evening withhold not thy hand, for thou knowest not which shall prosper this or that, or whether both shall be alike good." We are commanded to sow, irrespective of the winds and the clouds, in season, out of season, when things are hopeful and when they are discouraging in their aspect, and the intimation is decidedly strong that one is as likely to prosper as the other, and a large probability that both will be remunerative. At any rate, cherish a mind to work, embrace every opportunity, and distrust all reasoning, every plea and pretext which would relax or suspend the obligation to try.

David, as every man ought to do, served his own generation not by plans of his devising, but according to the will of God. He was an example of modesty, fidelity and courage in the humble walks of his early life. He addressed himself to the duties of the present without wasting time in dreamy imaginings of better days and more favorable opportunities. He did not decline doing what he could because he could not do what he would; did not strain after distant objects, overlooking and underrating the interests at hand, but filled every position according to its demands. In every period and every relation he maintained and manifested principles and dispositions which rendered him useful civilly, morally, religiously. As a son and a father, a citizen and a soldier, a subject and a king, in obscurity and splendor, in triumph and exile, in the fervors of youth and the infirmities of age, he was consecrated to duty. His wisdom, his authority, his wealth, were all employed in the service of his generation. While by his inspiration as a prophet he is, through the Book of Psalms, still serving the church and the world, yet he is commended to our admiration and imitation because he filled his place while he lived, met the demands of his station, the lowest and the highest, appropriated talents, influence, power, for the benefit of others, administered government in the interests of private integrity and public justice, and sought by well-laid plans to enlarge and perpetuate his influence for good among the people committed to his care. When age came upon him and he could go out to battle no more, when by the might of his generalship he had subdued all his enemies, and the fame of his prowess was a bar to invasion and the turbulent elements, at home were all hushed to rest and he re-established upon his throne in safety and peace, still alive to the principles, objects and habits of his life, he projected as his last grand contribution to the wants of his generation a temple for the worship of the Most High. When once resolved, always prompt to act, he proceeded to amass materials, sparing no expense, determined to leave a house for God as the crowning memorial of his long and useful life. God forbade him to build the house because he had been a man of war and had shed blood, but approved and accepted the purpose of his heart. The work was reserved for Solomon, as a man of peace, but David did what he was allowed to do, and so fulfilled the will of God in the service of his generation.

At last this mighty man "fell on sleep." How expressive the word! The warfare ended, the soldier rests; life's stormy doom wrought out, peace settles like the hush of night upon the scene. The work of the day finished with the setting sun, the weary laborer sinks gently to sleep, a term which suggests cessation from labor, enjoyment of repose, and susceptibility of revival. Our friend Lazarus sleepeth, said Jesus to his disciples, but I go that I may awake him out of sleep. Our departed friends are not dead, they sleep, and Jesus declares that he will come again, and they shall hear his voice, and they that hear shall live. Earth is undulated with the graves of her children, and ocean rolls in fathomless silence over the loved and lost, but both shall yield up their sacred deposits at the last trump, and heaven grow rich with the jewels rescued from the spoiler, Death, and garnered so long in the grave, the treasury of the skies.

Those who knew Dr. MYERS as I knew him, will perceive that the principles embodied in the foregoing remarks were as much the suggestions of his history as the outgrowth of the passage we have been considering. He was an eminent example of fidelity to duty in every position, not for the sake of personal advantage, but for the benefit of others. He served his generation with unselfish devotion, with great self-denial of his taste, his ease, and his wordly store, and at last laid down his life a sacrifice to the church and his race.

I first saw EDWARD H. MYERS in the winter of 1832, at a session of the Georgia Conference, in LaGrange. He was then a mere boy, on his way from Florida to Randolph-Macon College. There and then began a friendship between us, intimate, confiding, which grew with our growth, ripened and mellowed with advancing years. Our affection was a current which ran smoothly, without murmur or ripple. Our fellowship was never disturbed in its concord by a jarring string. We differed sometimes concerning measures of church policy, but our discussions were kind and mutually deferential. His death to me was a terrible shock. So sudden, so unexpected, knowing that he had the yellow fever once before, and having escaped so long, I thought him secure. Without knowledge of his attack, the tidings of his death overwhelmed me. But he is not, for God took him. I opened not my mouth, I was dumb with silence, because Thou didst it.

Dr. MYERS was an active member of the Conference, but never itinerated much. This was no choice or plan of his, but doubtless by the will of God. In his earlier years he had a disease of the throat, which disqualified him for constant preaching. The church withal had need of his services in another department of work, and set him to teaching. For this he was admirably endowed. Highly cultured, the processes of his own education, gave him an aptitude for the instruction of others. Patient, pains-taking and thorough, he gave entire satisfaction in all of the institutions he served. A student as well as a Professor, he enlarged his scholarship by his vocation. The discipline of teaching trained his mind to accuracy, and the preparation for his daily duties in teaching, with the intervals allowed for general reading and study, ministered to the extension of his knowledge. He improved his time and opportunity. His profiting appeared to all. Pious, consecrated, without self-seeking, Providence led him along step by step, making one work a preparation for another. All his changes of position were in the regular order of church work, and followed each other without friction and without his contrivance. As a traveling preacher, a Professor, President of a College, Editor of a church paper, then presiding again over the same institution, and last of all in the regular work of the ministry, he was led quietly along, no scheming, no diplomacy, but cheerfully filling his place at the call of the church and by the will of God. No man was displaced to make room for him, but when the opening occurred a general conviction of his fitness designated him as the man and bade him enter. Set apart by solemn vows to the work of God, he had no will of his own, but obeyed the voice of the church. The church confided in him and he never disappointed her. Equal to every task assigned him, he met all its demands. Energetic, prompt, careful; he was always ready. His active mind, stimulated by the claims and calls of a new position, developed capacities latent to his own consciousness, perhaps, certainly surprising to his friends. No one attribute was so prominent as to dominate his character. He was many-sided, distinct but symmetrical, not specially distinguished in one thing more than another, but really good in all. Sagacious, comprehensive, capable of the broadest generalizations, yet familiar with the smallest details, at home in all the minutiae of the theoretic or the practical. He was "a man of affairs."

In Dr. MYERS there was a substratum of native intellect, but he developed slowly. He was greatly indebted to the schools which educated what was in him. The miner opens his shaft and brings from below earth's hidden treasure, so education roused and trained and matured in Dr. M. faculties which else had slept in darkness. His mind was mathematical rather than metaphysical. He did not speculate; he was not imaginative. He was familiar with facts and principles and reasons. His convictions were commonly clear, even intense, and he seemed to be self-willed, obstinate, to those who did not understand his mental operations. If any man could show him a reason which he had not seen for another view, he was open to the light and ready to yield. He loved the truth, and was always ready to embrace it.

His mind was constructive—great to design, full of expedients. He could plan a new house, project improvements in an old one, suggest modes of relief in difficulty, concoct schemes for the execution of a purpose, and devise ways and means more readily than any man I know. In the world of trade, he would have been a first-class financier; in agriculture, a model farmer; in law, as a jurist, profound; as an advocate, tender, faithful, effective. In medicine he would have excelled, exhausting all the books, but relying largely upon his reasoning and his observations. As a legislator, he would have been distinguished for the number and the wisdom of his measures. As a preacher—I am at a loss, for, strange to say, I rarely ever heard him. In the judgment of others, he was eminent and growing. He was rich in thought, had a facile use of language, and if his sermons ever lacked interest, it was because his style of thought and expression demanded close attention and a trained mind for full appreciation. He was never pedantic; did not use words of "learned length and thundering sound," but his sentences were long and sometimes parenthetical, and required effort to keep up with him. He was sometimes free from all these drawbacks, and then he was powerful, clear, strong, pathetic. To edify the church seemed to be his study. He was jealous of her morals, longed for her spirituality and purity, and he labored to build her up on the right foundation. He loved to preach himself, and greatly enjoyed the preaching of others. He was a good listener, appreciative, sympathetic, responsive. He was far above envy, jealousy, or disparaging another. Rejoiced in the labors and success of another as much as in his own. He had all the elements of usefulness in large measure—talent, knowledge, zeal, piety. Having retired from the editorial chair and the Presidency of a College, for the last three years he had devoted himself with all the ardor of his youth to the work of the pastorate. He had endeared himself to his people by his capacity, fidelity and devotion. To his own convictions of duty he stood firm in the face of a raging pestilence, and while ministering to the sick and dying, fell at his post at once a victim and a sacrifice.

Dr. MYERS was a deeply religious man. Far more so than those not familiar with his spirit-sentiments and habits would have thought. In general, he was not demonstrative in his piety, and yet always firm, uniform, consistent. Now and then his heart overflowed. Tears and smiles and exclamations of praise told of his unutterable joy. Christian principle was with him an ever-present force, moulding his character, deepening his experience, and sanctifying his nature. His religious feelings expressed themselves not so much in the forms and phrases of personal enjoyment as in travail of soul for the church, an inappeasable yearning for the revival of the work of God. Sometimes when his anxious, burdened soul would pour itself out in prayers and intercessions, and his faith would grasp the promises, he was transfigured in countenance, manner and expression. In these scenes he was an incarnate type of the two highest forms of religious emotion, travail and transport. All that I could say was well expressed by himself, when, being told that he must die, he said: "I am ready, and have been for a long time." There is a long biography in a single sentence. It tells of settled faith, assured hope, composure, satisfaction. His lamp was burning, and there was oil in the vessel.

It is a singular fact, considering the intrinsic merits of the man, the use made of him, the offices he filled, the influence he exerted, that our departed friend and brother was never popular. To those who did not know him well, he lacked personal magnetism. A little brusque in his manner, he was regarded as cold and repulsive, and many were chilled in their affection because they never ventured near enough to feel the warmth of his genial nature. It was a conclusive demonstration of his real merits, that when important things were to be done, offices of responsibility to be filled, many who did not like him, nevertheless leaned upon him, trusted in him, and expected great things from him. And now all bewail his death. There is a felt vacuum in the Conference, in the Church, and in all the more private councils of the brethren. A latent love long suppressed by misconceptions of him, breaks forth in panegyrics. The meed of commendation justly due to the living man is lavished upon the tomb of the dead. The day of his death has been the day of his triumph. Conscious injustice is atoning for the error of its judgment by confession and eulogy, sorrow and tears. The voice of disparagement is hushed; none name him but to praise. Dr. MYERS delighted in the love and approbation of his friends, and it is a comfort to me to know that in appreciation, confidence and love, I was not in arrears to him when he died. It is a still greater consolation that Conferences and Churches, preachers and people, with one consent and generous impulse, unite with me, and those who knew him best and loved him most, to admire his character, honor his memory and weep at his grave.

EDWARD HOWELL MYERS "having served his generation by the will of God, has fallen on sleep," and rests in the narrow house. He will awake by and by. The Master will call and the servant will hear. "Jesus died and rose again, even so, them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." Immortality! what a prerogative? Eternity! what a destiny? Heaven, bright, beautiful and blest! what a home?

Our brother the haven hath gained.
Outflying the tempest and wind,
His rest he hath sooner obtained,
And left his companions behind.

We are going. Soon we shall be gone. Let us work while it is day, so that when the messenger comes we, too, may be "ready"—

"Adorned with Christ and meet for God."
